A. Multiculturalism:

5/(5)

Name the three models of multicultural societies.

- segregation
- assimilation (aka. "melting pot")
- integration (aka. "salad bowl")

Briefly argue for the one you personally consider to be the best. Why?

In my ~~(personal)~~ opinion, the best model ~~(of them)~~ is integration. It is the halfway point between segregation and assimilation, thus being the perfect balance between integrating different cultures (hence the name) ~~(and)~~ and not keeping them separate, while also allowing for individuality and preservation of said backgrounds ~~(cultural)~~ cultural.

B. Immigration

8/(10)

Compare the main reasons for immigration to the US in the 19th/20th century with those of today.

What similarities and differences can you identify? (3 aspects each).

Similarities:

- People still come to the US ~~(looking)~~ looking for ~~(financial)~~ financial opportunities. In the 19th and 20th centuries, the emerging economy of the US presented fruitful chances ~~(of)~~ for people to make money, causing many to "have a go at it". The same happens today, but people leave their own countries because the US one of the biggest ~~(economies)~~ and most solid economies.
- Immigration is also still one of the ways to escape local tensions (e.g. wars and internal conflicts) even to this day, and the US seems to be one of many targeted destinations ~~(that)~~ in which people seek refuge in.
- People still immigrate to the ~~(USA)~~ US hoping for better living conditions in general, seen that many countries don't offer good jobs, ~~(that)~~ have very high inflation, etc. Because of this, ~~however~~ the stability that the US present is very appealing to those people, so they immigrate.

Differences:

→ Nowadays people also ~~(are still doing)~~ immigrate to the US with the main goal of studying, be it in school or even in the "ivy league colleges". The exponential rate of globalization has made traveling like this much easier, that being one of the reasons ~~(why)~~ why that wasn't the case back in the 19-20th ~~(cent)~~ centuries.

→ People now come to the US to learn more about its culture and to obtain life experiences, which was also not the case in the 19th/20th centuries. (-)
